Schooling through time

Sticky learning

- The great fire of London is an event outside of living memory. The first WW and how it affected the country and that we now remember it on remembrance day.

New Knowledge

- I know how to identify features of my school that are old and those that are new to show how the school has changed.
- I know how schools have changed over my parents' generation and my grandparents' generations.
- I know how schools have changed and how lessons were delivered in the Victorian times.
- I know what school uniforms used to look like and what items of clothing were worn.
- I know how different events through time affected schools in particular the second world war and the blitz.
